To raise new questions, new possibilities, to regard old problems from a new angle, requires creative imagination.

Spring might finally be here for Edmontonians and to welcome the season, I want to extend warm greetings to all of my talented clients. After arriving back in Canada last June, I worked hard to get The Drawing Board launched and the effort has been worth it. With diverse new clients and stronger relationships with existing clients, the year has been a great success!

As many of my clients are aware, I am pursuing my Masters degree at the University of Alberta and the first year of research and studies has been wonderful. In addition to the business side of things, I was the recipient of two awards in the last 4 months – the AGCG's Top 30 Under 30 Global Cooperation Award and a bursary from the Canadian Federation of University Women. On April 28, I was honoured at City Hall during a Council Chamber meeting by Mayor Don Iveson for my work in Morocco.

With the summer comes a break from school. If you have been thinking of a new project that needs significant backend content writing or you've been wondering whether or not to do an eBook – now is the time! I would be happy to devote more attention to any larger-scale projects you have in mind.

Sincerely, Nakita Valerio
